ing in America was in Charleston. He was a farmer by occupation, and died and was buried in Orangeburg county.

Some interesting incidents in connection with his soldier life during the Revolution are related by his descendants.

The maternal grandfather of Captain D. A. Switzer was John Brandenburg, who was a Revolutionary soldier, and as such his life was also eventful and replete with interest.

He was a merchant after the Revolution, and it is stated that he was a very ingenious man. Both of the grandfathers referred to suffered many hardships and dangers during the Revolution and were in several battles and skirmishes in that great struggle for American liberty.

Referring again to Frederick Switzer, the father of Captain D. A. Switzer, he was twice married, first to Katy Brandenburg. By this marriage one son was born: John R. Switzer of Laurens county, S. C., who at this writing (1900) is about ninety years of age. By the second marriage to a Miss Brandenburg, sister or cousin of the first wife, he had children as follows: Frederick, who married Julia, daughter of Rev. Warren Drummond, both living in Arkansas, where they reared a highly respectable family and own large possessions; David A., the subject of this sketch; Mary, who married Harvey Drummond, a highly respected citizen and son of Rev. Warren Drummond. Both Harvey Drummond and his wife are now dead, but they reared a family of high respectability and social position. The next child in order was Luther Switzer, who died while reading medicine with Dr. L. C. Kennedy at Spartanburg. He was never married.

Henry, another son, was a resident of the State of Arkansas at the outbreak of the civil war. He volunteered and entered the Confederate service as captain of a company in a regiment organized in his State, as did also his brother Frederick. This regiment belonged to Holmes's division and did gallant service in the capture of Fort Helena on the Mississippi River. He was subsequently captured, and was kept for a time in close confinement where he contracted disease and died. He was a promising and gallant young man and was never married. One daughter, Barbary, of Frederick Switzer married Sanford Mahaffey of Laurens county, S. C. She died about fifteen months after her marriage.

James, the youngest son of Frederick, lives at the old homestead of his father. He is a progressive farmer and married Julia, daughter of John B. Archer of Spartanburg. They have six sons, viz.: James, John, Edgar, Paul, Wells and Carroll, all with him.

Captain David A. Switzer, the subject of our sketch, was educated mainly at Slabtown, S. C., under John L. Kennedy, an able instructor in his day and time. Before the civil war he was commissioned as captain of the Concord Beat company, which paraded near his present residence (Switzer, S. C.), and as such served with efficiency for eight years. This company formed a part of the old 36th Regiment, S. C. M. During the period that he commanded this company it was a part of his duty to preserve the peace and keep good order in his beat by the appointment of patrols, which duty he performed to the entire satisfaction of all.

At the beginning of the civil war Captain Switzer volunteered for the Confederate service, but being seriously afflicted with rheumatism he was rejected. He soon after went to Hot Springs, Ark., to restore his health, and after remaining there for a time returned home and volunteered a second time, but was again rejected by a board of examining surgeons. While at home he rendered valuable service to his country in providing for the poor and needy, and especially for the wives of the soldiers in his section who were in the army.

Since the war he has remained on his farm attending strictly to his private business, but is broad-and liberal-minded, and is a consistent member of the Baptist church. He has never aspired to politics or public office, but has always been classed as a progressive and industrious farmer and a useful citizen.

In the latter part of the seventies he married Miss Katy Mahaffey of Laurens county. By this marriage four children were born, viz.: Rosa, who married Dr. J. B. Stepp, one child, Katy G.; Willie, who died in childhood; Minnie, who married Ralph Jorden, one child, Catharine; and David A., youngest child, twenty-one years, unmarried.

COLONEL FLAVIUS JEFFERSON POOLE

was born in Lexington county, S. C., October 19th, 1834. His grandfather, William Poole, was born in Westmoreland county, Va., and in early manhood moved to Lexington county, where he reared a family of two boys and three girls. The eldest of the sons was Aaron Poole, the father of the subject of this sketch, who married a daughter of George Crim of Lexington county. Of the five children that resulted from this marriage only Colonel Poole and one sister (Mrs. Carrie Jackson of Spartanburg) survive.

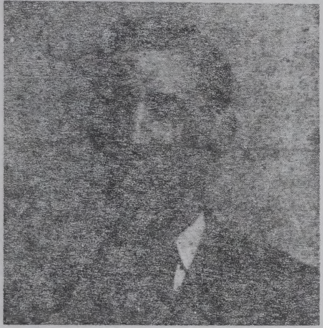
Both the grandparents of Colonel Poole were Revolutionary soldiers. When he was a lad his father died, but his mother married again and removed to Spartanburg county, where he was reared, living on a farm near Reidville and receiving a limited education at the Reidville High School, which he attended for three sessions, paying his tuition and board out of the limited funds which he had accumulated before entering.

Professor Davis, who was then his instructor, was very anxious that he should continue at school, and learning that he was not in a position financially to pay board and tuition, proposed to instruct him free of tuition as long as he could continue in school. For this token of kindness and interest taken in him he has always had a loving remembrance of Professor Davis.

One day while realizing the awkwardness of his position—being without a job and without means with which to create one—he received a message from a kind friend asking him to call at his home, that he would like to see him, with which request he complied at once. This kind friend was none other than Colonel B. T. Brockman, who was then merchandizing about two miles from Reidville.

A short time after this he learned that he had been recommended to Colonel Brockman by his good friend Wm. W. Calvert, with whom he had boarded while at school, and also with whom he had lived before. To this day Mr. and Mrs. Calvert are as dear to him as father and mother.



COL. F. J. POOLE

Colonel Brockman offered him a position in his store, which he accepted and went to work at once. This was in the year 1858.

Here he remained until the breaking out of the war between the States, when a company was raised in that community for the Confederate service. This was called the "Brockman Guards" and became subsequently Co. B, 13th Regiment, S. C. V., of which F. J. Poole became second sergeant, and which was organized near Reidville, S. C., being composed of the very best material in that community.

Soon after the seven days' battle around Richmond Sergeant Poole was elected junior second lieutenant of his company vice T. A. Baswell resigned, and upon the death of Captain Jesse R. Brockman from wounds received in battle, he was promoted to the captaincy of his company, his commission dating from the 12th of May, 1864.

Captain Poole was wounded three times. First at Chancellorsville, which disabled him for three or four months; second, Jericho Ford; and third, at Jones's Farm, near Petersburg. He also suffered during the war from a severe attack of typhoid fever.

Company B, 13th S. C. Regiment, which Captain Poole had the honor of commanding, succeeding the gallant Brockman, slain in battle, had enlisted from first to last about 150 men. Of this number about 28 were killed and died from wounds received on battlefield. About 31 died of disease, and about 36 were wounded in battle and survived. At present about 38 or 40 members are living.

From Appromattox, after the surrender of General Lee, Captain Poole marched on foot to his home in Spartanburg. He was seventeen days on the road, having to lie over two or three days on account of the painfulness of the wound received at Chancellorsville.

After returning home in May, 1865, he began teaching, which he continued through the following year—1866. In 1881 he removed to Piedmont, S. C., where he has since been employed in a mercantile firm.

Colonel Poole derives his present title of colonel from the fact that on the 5th of May, 1899, as commander of Camp Crittenden, No. 707, U. C. V., Piedmont, S. C., he was unanimously elected colonel by the camps of Greenville county, S. C., vice Colonel James A. Hoyt, resigned, which position he at present holds.

On the 18th June, 1863, Colonel Poole was married to Miss Mary E. Johnson, eldest daughter of Rev. Washington Johnson, a Baptist minister. Six children have been born unto them—two boys and four girls.

CAPT. ANDREW KENDRE SMITH.

The subject of this sketch was the second son of Rev. Bornette Smith, a pioneer Methodist minister, who, with his father Charles Smith, a soldier of the Revolution, emigrated to South Carolina soon after the close of the Revolutionary War.

Andrew was born May 15th, 1823, and was killed on

With the grandsons of Colonel Poole were three soldiers, namely: Each of them had his father died, but the mother stayed until was removed to Spartanburg county, where he was raised, living on a farm near Reidville and receiving a limited education at the Reidville High school, which he attended for three sessions, paying his board and tuition out of the limited funds which he had accumulated before entering.

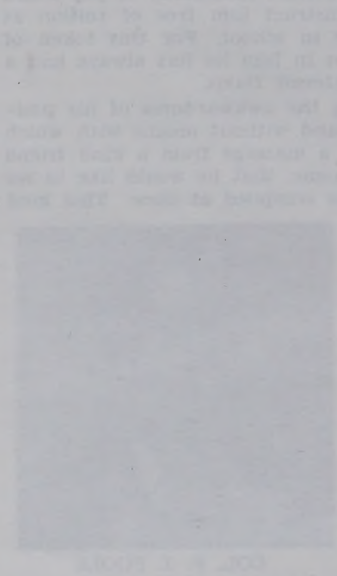
This good friend was none other than Colonel, D. T. Blackstock, who was then merchandising about two miles from Reidville.

A short time after this he learned that he had been recommended to Colonel Blackstock by his good friend Wm. W. Calvert, with whom he had boarded while at school, and with whom he had lived before. To this day his care, Colonel, was as dear to him as father and mother.



COL. H. L. POOLE

Colonel Poole later offered him a position in his store, which he accepted and went to work at once. This was in the year 1858.

Here he remained until the breaking out of the war between the States, when he promptly and eagerly volunteered for the Confederate service. He was in the "Reidville Guards" and subsequently Co. H 13th Regiment, S. C. V., of which B. A. Poole [illegible], and which was organized near

Captain Poole was wounded three times. First at Chancellorsville, which disabled him for three or four months; second, Jericho Ford; and third, at Jones's Farm, near Petersburg. He also suffered during the war from a severe attack of typhoid fever.

Company H, 13th S. C. Regiment, which Captain Poole led, the House of Chancellorsville, numbering the gallant Brockman, which in 1861, had enlisted from first to last about 137 men. Of this number about 28 were killed and died from wounds received on battlefield. About 11 died of disease, and about 22 were wounded in battle and survived. INTRODUCTION

POOL--POOLE--VANPOOL--VANPOOLE--VAN POOL--VAN POOLE

The families about whom this history has been written have had a different spelling of the name from the earliest listing in legal documents in the year 1757[1] until the recording of this narrators own children in California state records under the name Poole.

Much of the early spelling of the name is believed to have resulted from misinterpretation of language and dialect. Seldom were legal documents written by the person concerned but they were handwritten by a Lawyer or County Court Clerk who wrote the facts that were orally presented. The signature or his mark by the person desiring the document was then all that was required.

Very often the name was misspelled two or more ways within the same document. Another factor in misspelling was the inability of the person, who required the document, to read or write English. This was no reflection upon the native intelligence of these persons because there were no schools in the backwoods where the pioneer emigrant and his family lived in the mid-seventeen hundreds.[2]

From research of county records, and by correspondence with distant relatives, it has been determined that our common ancestor Van Poole was German.[3] The exact spelling prior to coming to America is unknown.[4] The wife of Jacob Van Poole was named Elizabeth and suspected, but not proven, to have been a daughter of David and Hannah Hampton.

Published histories of North Carolina have stated that David and John Hampton settled in Rowan County in early 1750's from Cecil County, Maryland.[5]

Jacob named his elder son David and possibly his daughter Hannah after the Hampton's. David's wife was named Elizabeth which would hardly be taken for German.

The Van Poole's, who remained in Rowan County, spoke German and had to be taught English.[3] They also lived in a German neighborhood and married into German families in that area. There was much doubt among the Poole's of Rowan County as to the correct spelling of the name[6], consequently you will find a father buried under the name Van Poole and some of his children buried under the name Poole.[7] Several brother's changed their names while others did not.[8] This practice also existed among the Pool's and Poole's in Kentucky.

In 1967, the Directory for Salisbury district in Rowan County carried the following telephone listings:

COMMUNITY	POOL	POOLE	VANPOOLE	VAN POOLE
Gold Hill	0	2	0	0
Granite Quarry	0	4	0	0
Rockwell	0	8	0	0
Salisbury	0	38	1	3

The name Van Poole is accepted in this history as the ancestral name in Rowan County, North Carolina. Henry, Jacob's son, dropped the " Van " and " e " when he left North Carolina for Kentucky.

The name P' Pool, found in the same areas of Christian, Caldwell and Trigg counties Kentucky is of Scotch origin---not German. The name originally was Pettypool and shortened to P' Pool. The first Pettypool's in those counties, were from Halifax and Mecklenburg counties in Virginia. They arrived in Kentucky later than our Henry Pool who was living in Christian County as early as 1805 or 1806.

A " History of The P' Pool Family 1700-1960 " compiled by Edward H. P' Pool and Dr. David Bruce P' Pool in Nashville, Tennessee---lists my grandfather, Dr. Robert Murry Pool and descendants, to be Pettypool's. This is entirely false and was based upon misinformation furnished the author by a relative (not of the Pool family). Pages 192 through 196 of this P' Pool history, is an excellent example of irresponsible compilation without verification of subject matter. If the authors had consulted published county histories and county records or corresponded with direct descendants of Dr. Robert Murry Pool, they would have prevented printing erroneous information that could be used, mistakenly, for reference material.

My sister, Hallie Jane(Pool) Waters (1890-1969), always maintained the Pool's were English and originally came from England. In this she was partially right and she said our grandfather, Dr. Robert Murry Pool, had eyes as blue as a gander's and was typically English in appearance.
He was about 5' - 6" or 7" tall, slender build with a drooping mustache. He used the letter "H" ahead of "it" and "aint"; also, he said thar for there which is indicative of the grammer used in that part of Kentucky before the year 1900.

When I seriously started research into the origin of the family name, I found information that left doubt as to the English origin which my sister had stated. My father, James Emanuel Pool, said our people originally came from Salibury, North Carolina to Kentucky. A letter written to The Kentucky Historical Society in Frankfort, Ky. brought a reply that several counties had histories written about the Pool's and contained biographies on Pool's from Christian and Caldwell counties. Copies made from the histories and furnished by my request, revealed where the English origin was derived.

Monroe Pool was the eldest brother of my grandfather, Dr. Bob Pool, and he stated in an interview to the compilers of "Kentucky", by J. H. Battle, W. H. Perrin and G. C. Kniffin in 1885; that the Pool's were of German descent and came from Rowan County, North Carolina. His grandfather, on his mother's side, Timothy A. Brown, was a native of England and when a small boy came to America and settled in Rowan County, N.C.
This established the English side of the family that my sister claimed but she had not known of the German ancestry on the Pool side.

Henry (Van) Pool(e), the grandfather of Monroe Pool and my grandfather, died in Christian County in 1824 before either of the aforesaid persons were born. Their own father, Dr. Timothy Brown Pool, was born(*1799-1805), and if he spoke or understood German, it was probably forgotten by the time his own children were old enough to notice it. They were raised in the neighborhood of their English grandmother and English cousins and may never have remembered hearing German spoken in the family.

When Henry (Van) Pool(e) married Margaret(Peggy) Brown, the sister of Timothy A. Brown, on 29 August 1791, he moved from the German neighborhood of the Van Poole's and lived close by the farm of his father-in-law, Timothy Brown, Sr. Henry seemed to have maintained only occasional contact with his parents, brother's and sister's after his marriage.

His father, Jacob Van Poole, in his will probated in 1795 stated; " Unto my son Henry I have given him his full share of all." Although Henry was a third son, he and his second oldest brother, John, were omitted from any executor responsibilities in their father's will. David, the eldest, and Jacob, Jr., just twenty or twenty-one years old, were designated the Executor's in the will. It is the apparent coolness of the father toward Henry that seems to indicate that he resented Henry marrying outside the German community and there may have been some conflict of temperment. This also may have infuenced Henry to drop the Van and (e) from his name and to leave for Kentucky with the Brown's and never to return to North Carolina.

They all departed for Kentucky in the Fall of 1805 or early Spring of 1806. The former date is the most likely time of their departure.

A perusal of copied documents of this history, will show the close relationship and association of Morgan's and Hampton's with Henry (Van) Pool(e) and his father's family; also, the names of these persons on documents that bear the names of Henry Vanpool, Henry Poole and Henry Van Pool are one and the same person. There was no other Henry Pool appearing in Rowan county records in his age group.

Our ancestors were mountaineer's, hunter's and planters. Their lands were extensive but tilled by their families since neither Henry Pool nor Timothy A. Brown were slaveholders. They settled in the Tradewater River wilderness before there were churches, stores, schools, doctors and artisans.

The comforts of civilization followed long after the frontier had become safe for the better educated and skilled persons to enter. Some came late after it was financially feasible for them to live among the pioneers who had very little money to purchase the goods for sale. The pioneer and those who followed all share equally the importance of their contributions to our civilization but only those who followed, in too many instances, are the ones whose names are remembered.

These pioneer's were faced with a mode of living unlike anything they had ever experienced in the past. Land had to be cleared of massive timber with only crude hand tools and their homes were windowless log cabins furnished with tables, benches and beds constructed by the pioneer with what crude tools were at hand. A fireplace provided heat, light and for cooking. Life on the frontier was a challenge that tested the durability and fortitude of the husband and wife alike. They traveled hundreds of miles through passes and over the mountains, forded rivers and endured inclement weather, sickness, perils of Indian raids and wild animals to establish a home on their own land.

From a History of New Market, published in the New Market Enterprise, a paper printed in 1888, and mimeographed by the Presbyterian Church of New Market in 1953, p. 4, "JOHN P. POOL was a gin maker and repairer and furnished the country with cotton presses, screws made from large white oak trees." (Note: This name seems to have been PETTIPOOL, and for some reason began to be written P'POOL, then just P. POOL. KPJ) This same book, p. 9, states, "PARHAM N. BOOKER was a Member of the House in 1836 and 1837. He was an educated and intelligent planter, frequently shared in debate and took an active part in the business of legislation...he removed to Perry County, Alabama, where he died many years ago, justly lamented by a large circle of friends."

Law suits to Alabama Supreme Court

The administrator had returned no inventory of debts against the estate except some parole evidence, tending to show some responsibility of estate for estate of one Rochelle, and for estate of William R. Meyer, deceased.

Will of R.B. Harrison, which is to this effect:

"I hereby amancipate and set free the following slaves (here follow their names) and wish they should remain in the State of Alabama, provided there can be a special act of Legislature obtained for that purpose. And if not, then it is my will and desire, they be removed to some free state, and be supplied out of the trust property hereinafter mentioned, with suitable means for a comfortable location in the State to which they may be removed. I give and bequeath unto Ephraim Poole, for the sole and exclusive use, benefit and begood of the said slaves (naming 27), the same to be kept and managed by the said Poole so long as he continues in the County of Dallas, State of Alabama, as a citizen thereof, for the sole and exclusive use, benefit and begood of the said amancipated slaves. Certain lands are devised to Poole, for the same trusts, and in the event of his removing from the State, a nephew of the decedent is named to the same trusts."

left a widow, Elizabeth B., since married to her co-defendant, Leach, but no child or children, and that since the death of James B. Brantly, all slaves embraced by deed, together with the slave, Carey, have been in possession of said Elizabeth B. and said Leach, who refuse to deliver them to the complainants. The two infant defendants are children of a deceased son of Jonathon Brantly.

HARRISON versus POOL

Error to County court of Dallas.

Detinue for a number of slaves by defendant against the plaintiff in error, who was the adm'r. with will annexed of Richard B. Harrison, deceased, and also a distribution of estate. Slaves in controversy belonged to decedent in South Carolina and were in charge of the defendant in error as his overseer. The latter lived with an illegitimate daughter of the decedent as his wife, but they were never married. Decedent and defendant in error removed from South Carolina to this state and the slaves after removal remained in possession of the defendant for some fifteen years and were worked by him on the lands which were said to belong to decedent and situated near his residence.

Just before the decedent's death, he executed a will, by which he bequeathed said slaves to the defendant, in trust for benefit of other of his slaves to defendant, in trust for benefit of other of his slaves when he attempted in his will to manumit.

Entry on minutes of Register in Chancery at Cahawba: "Before Register this 28th May, A.D. 1844; in matter of trusteeship under will of Richard B. Harrison. This day came Ephraim Pool, appointed trustee under will of R.B. Harrison, deceased, and applied to give bond and qualify as such trustee which application is refused by the Register."

At one time, Richard B. Harrison resided in South Carolina and the defendant in error had been an overseer for him. That Pool occasionally lived with the reputed illegitimate daughter of Harrison, but was never married to her.

John Harrison, one of distributees.

POOL'S HEIRS versus POOL'S EXR.

Appeal from Probate Court of Dallas.

In matter of last will and testament of EPHRAIM POOL, deceased, which was propounded for probate by GEORGE L. STEWART, the executor therein named. DR. TANNER, who was attending physician at time of his death, testified.

Testator's will directed his executor to carry certain slaves (towit: Harriet, a mulatto woman, and several children of another woman, who were principally raised by her, and whose father the testator appears to have been) to Ohio for purpose of emancipation, and to invest in a bank for their benefit the entire proceeds arising from the sale of all his property.

R. K. HARRISON testified among other things that he had known POOL intimately for about 16 years; that he brought the woman Harriet with him to Ala.; that Harriet was the reputed daughter of RICHARD B. HARRISON, deceased, who gave POOL after his removal to Ala. 15 or 20 likely negroes; that POOL had them 8 or 10 years, working them and after HARRISON's death, delivered them to his admrs.

p.77 1840 - Wyatt Heflin of Big River, now Louina Beat, was a farmer, 57 years of age and a Democrat. He moved to Randolph County from Fayette Va., sent an order to the Captains in each regiment in his brigade to send him the best drilled soldier in their companies. The writer was in command of Co. K., 13th Ala. Regiment, and sent Jesse Savage. Those sent were placed in line and a trial inspection made. On the first all but four were dismissed; on the second two more, on the third trial Jesse stood alone, and received the honor of being the best drilled soldier in the brigade. General Colquitt had him detailed as a sentinel in front of his headquarters. Jesse did not like the idea of being away from his two brothers and neighbor boys, and asked the General to let him go back to his company, which was granted. This characteristic of Jesse was strongly developed in his brothers, which was inherited from their father.

W.H. Spruce was 46 years of age when elected in 1850. He was a Democrat, teacher, farmer, a member of the M.E. Church. He had a good common school education, made a good officer, and was elected superintendent of education in 1855 or '56, and took a great interest in building and establishing schools and encouraging teachers. He stood well in his church and community. He raised a large and interesting family, but was unfortunate with his sons who are all dead and without posterity. After he lost his favorite son, Johnnie, in the Confederate services, and the oldest, "Spark", had died, he said to the writer in tears of sadness and words of anguish, "I had lived to hope and cherish the one desire of my heart until now to perpetuate and hand down to future ages, time and generation in name of all others to one most dear--Spruce." "But", said he in tones of despondency and desolation, "when I die, and that time you see can't be far off, (he was then suffering with a cancer) and the name Spruce dies. I am the only living male left, and with me it goes, and I shall be forgotten, so also the name of Spruce. I am not dreading death. I feel I am prepared to die and stand in judgment. But how can I reconcile the justice, mercy and love of God in this of all other afflictions to me most tormenting and anguishing?" He died a short time afterwards, December 1879, in his 57th year, after suffering with cancer of the mouth--loved and honored and mourned by all.

Elias M. Burgess was elected in 1851. He was 39 years of age then, a Democrat, school teacher, farmer and Justice of the Peace, living near Lamar when war was declared. He made up a company of about forty (the writer being one of the number) on July 4th, 1861, at Lamar. There was a big dinner given that day and Miss Cynthia Tomlinson made a nice little speech. E.B. Smith, of Brockville, was present with about forty volunteers on his list; and the two, Burgess and Smith, agreed to unite into one company. They agreed to elect the officers alternately by ballot. Smith was elected Captain; E.M. Burgess 2nd Junior Lieutenant, and on July 12th, 1861, this company left Brockville for Montgomery, where it was mustered into service July 28th. Lieutenant Burgess took a great deal of pride in drill and other duties, and at the Seven Pines battle distinguished himself for bravery, courage and leadership. While the regiment was supporting those engaged, Lieutenant Colonel H. R. Dawson ordered a retreat and was leading the way. Lt. Burgess saw Col. Dawson's blunder and snatched the regiment colors and rallied all but Dawson back on the breast works. Col. Dawson resigned in short order and nothing but a Junior rank of a second Lieutenancy kept Lieut. Burgess from regimental promotion. On the morning of June 27, 1862, and the second day of the Seven Days fight just as the dawn of twilight cast off the shades of darkness, a brisk breeze kissed the silken folds of the 13th Alabama Regimental colors and she spread her wings in majesty and grandeur in recognition of the will and wishes of the strong arm and brave heart of Col. Sergeant J.W. Stallings, who held her aloft, which chanced to challenge the eye of the Federal sentinel, who in turn sent greetings and salutations on the wings of canister and grape with malice and intent of forethought of her destruction and capture. But there stood four breastworks made of flesh and blood to keep her afloat and defend her liberty; they were the bravest of the brave, Capt. John T. Smith; Lieut. E.M. Burgess; Sergeant J. L. Savage, Co. "K", and Private J.W. Brown, Co. "D". There Capt. Clark, Co. "A", Lieut. Burgess, Co. "K" and Private Thad Pool, Co. "I" crossed the Jordan of life. The writer heard Lieut. Burgess's last farewell to man, saw the spirit of life leaving him before returning to the God who gave it; and as have had promised, saw his body laid to rest within a few feet of where its spirit had left it. He was killed in the road and buried just out and opposite on the bank. God took him as he had expressed a desire to the writer and others he wanted him to do. One Sunday morning in Capt. E.B. Smith's log tent--it was in April, 1862, just before the siege at Yorktown, where we were then in camp--thirteen in number besides Mrs. Lieut. Guinn, the following named persons we remember as a part of those present, Capt. E.B. Smith, Lieut, J.M.K. Guinn, Lieut, A.T. Reaves, Lieut. E.M. Burgess, Corporal Shelt Savage, Rev. Lewis J. Black, Private J.J. Meachum and Thompson Reaves--8 in number, the other five we have forgotten--were passing the time talking about our chances in getting home alive, when the subject came up as to where we had rather be wounded. Thompson Reaves, as well as we remember, started the subject by saying, "I had rather be wounded by having my index finger on my right hand shot off." Then said he, "I could get a discharge and stay at home." John J. Meachum said, "Thomps, I'll take my big toe and that would give me a furlough, and I'll stay if I once get there." (meaning home). Shelt Savage said, "I believe I'd take my left side." Capt. Smith said, "Shelt, I am like you. I want both hands and feet and I'd take my right side." Lieut Reaves said: "Boys, I'll take my foot. Polly is good company and I had rather be with her than anywhere else." Lieut Guinn said, "I'll take my left arm between the wrist and elbow; I could come and go when I pleased." Lieut. Burgess said, (suiting the occasion by placing his finger in the center of his forehead), "I want to be hit right here and where killed be buried." Rev. Lewis J. Black said, "I don't care where I am hit, I only pray God, if I am to be wounded seriously to cause my death, I may be killed so dead that not a muscle of my face, arm, leg or body will move. I pray God that this may be made so as a token and evidence that you all, my wife, father, mother, brother, the members of my church and everybody else, may know that I am a Christian and that I will meet them in heaven." The scriptures say: "The last shall be first." Lewis Black was the first; while laying behind the breastworks, at the battle of Seven Pines, he was struck by a ball in the head. Old soldiers know when a ball hits them, it sounds like a marble hitting a board, this was the case with the one hitting Lewis. Every eye near him was instantly turned toward him; for they all knew and most of them had heard him pray to God that it might be thus--we inquired diligently and critically for we had promised him too, to see if his prayer was answered, and they all testified that not a feature of his person moved that they saw. Lieut. Burgess being next to last selecting, was the next to first killed. On the morning of June 27th, near a cow-trail coming obliquely into the road cutting the space of three or more feet wide through the bank three or four feet high to the level of the road bed, while standing cautioning the boys of the danger in passing it, as the Yankees had one or two pieces of artillery planted to cover it, which had killed Captain Clark and Thad Pool, he was struck with a minnie ball in the forehead just where he had selected and was buried as near the spot as was thought prudent. The last but two and the first but two, Lieut. J.M.K. Guinn was the next. A piece of shell struck his left arm between the wrist and elbow just where he too had selected that fatal Sunday morning. The next was Lieut. A.T. Reaves, shot through the foot as he had selected. Lieuts. Burgess, Guinn and Reaves were shot on the same day--June 27th--the second day of the Seven Day's battle. The next two were Thompson Reaves and John J. Meachum. Reaves had his finger shot off and Meachum his big toe--just as they had selected. The writer was at home on furlough when they came home, when Mrs. Guinn related the circumstances, calling the names of the entire thirteen and with special attention to the six at that time, wounded as desired and selected. In the spring following Capt. Smith and Sergeant Shelt Savage were wounded each in the side, as they had selected. The other five we have forgotten their names. If we knew where Thompson Reaves and Shelt Savage were, for they were alive when last heard from, we would write them; perhaps they would remember the others.

Tax Assessors

August 1853, David A. Perryman, then 27 years of age, and a mail contractor, was elected Tax Assessor. In politics he was ever loyal, open and pronounced in his fidelity to the national nominee; but local and state elections he usually voted for the lesser of two evils. He opposed secession, had no ambition or disposition to shoot or be shot at by the "Yanks" and out-general Herod in keeping out of the war and staying at home, which he certainly did. He voted the Cooperation ticket in 1866, and for Horatio Seymore in 1868; was a Grant man in 1872, and since that time voted the Republican ticket. In state, county and local elections he voted for the man generally. He is one of the most active, industrious, presevering and energetic men in the county; but at the same time, he has never been rightly or justly accused so far as we have heard, of manual hard labor. In fact, he said; "When a boy, I was not able to labor until I was twenty-five; since then I have managed so as not to have to do it." In other words when a boy he was physically incapacitated to labor, and since a man morally indisposed to do so. He has managed to inform himself with the practical workings and requirements of the postal and pension laws and rulings and forms of these departments, from which he had made a good living and educated his children. "All I lack of being a wise man," said he, "is learning it, for I never forget anything I ever learned." This is no doubt theoretically true, for he has a remarkable memory and a never-failing fountain of wit, humor and tenor of sarcasm. He is the encyclopedia of Randolph County and her public men. Judge John T. Heflin who bore the sobriquet "law-library", was another as equally as remarkable for memory. Esq. Perryman came to this county in 1843. He carried the mail for years, and was associated as principal or deputy census taker in 1860, '70, '80, and '90.

He has been Notary Public, Justice of the Peace, County Commissioner of Roads and Revenue, and was elected to the Legislature--vice Milton D. Barron, deceased--in 1863, but refused to take his seat because he feared to trust 200 pounds of Union loyalty to fill a Confederate loyalty seat. He used to be an active Mason. He is now a member of the Primitive (Hardshell) Baptist, and quotes scripture like a theologian student. On one occasion he met Rev. Moses Park, a Christian divine, whose daily theme was the revelation of God's word. And as the reverend and learned divine began to reveal the mysteries and wonders of the treasures of the goodness, mercy and love of God, by quoting text after text to support his church creed, Esq. Perryman, as the opportunity and occasion demanded, dropped in a Primitive text. This at first stimualted Rev. Mose, and he became enthused over the love and mercies of God. Esq. P. quickly quoted one of his Primitive predestinations from before the foundation text. Rev. P. raised his head and looked him in the eye and asked: "Are you a preacher?" "No," answered Esq. P. "Are you not a member of a church?" "Yes," replied Esq. P., "but I am like the negro that had the small pox. It has never marked me."

Esq. Perryman is one of Randolph's best citizens; he is liberal, charitable and neighborly. He is now in his 60th year and is remarkably active and stout for a man of his age. He lives in Rockdale Beat No. 3, where he had made his home for many years.

- - - -

W.T. Wood was elected in 1854, and was at the time 24 years of age. He lived near Chulafinnee, was a Democrat, and made a creditable record. He rasied a company, was elected Captain, and left for the war March 19, 1862. He was elected to the State Senate in 1863 by the Union or anti-war contingent.

- - - -

J.C. Burson, of Burson's beat, formerly Cherokee, but now High Shoals, was elected in 1855. He was one of the leading men in his beat and took a great deal of pride in the discharge of his official duties. He was Justice of the Peace for several years, and stood well with his party and people.

William Ingram of Delta beat, was elected in 1857. He was a bachelor, 34 years of age and is now 72 and living in the same community, which is a portion of Clay County. He made a most excellent official, and the Democrat Party, to which he belonged, re-elected him until his political opponents became hysterical and chronic in the extreme. In 1863 when the hardships of the war and men being conscripted and forced out, the sentiments of voters were indifferent as to officers, and turned to partisan and political aspirations and promotions. Mr. Ingram being a secessionest and a war man and that element having been in power and control, was charged with all the cruelties and hardships of the war and the sufferings of poor widows and orphan children. He was defeated by a good majority contrary to his or his opponents expectations. He represented Clay County in the legislature a few years since as an Organize Democrat. He taught school in Wedowee in 1852 or '53. The writer remembers when his father came home one night and said: "Boys, school will open Monday week. We have employed Mr. William Ingram; he is a good teacher, comes well recommended and can teach English grammar to the tenth rule

Barron, Wilson Falkner and Charles Foster, the Whigs ran C.J. Ussery, D.V. Crider and John McCollough, the Know Nothings ran Dr. R. Robertson, E.B. Smith and James Cole, and Independent Z. Darden. Ussery's defeat was about one hundred majority. He was a strong secessionist in 1861, and was elected to the Legislature with Col. James Aiken and ex-sheriff A.W. Denman. After the war he voted with the Democrats, and in 1876, was again elected to the Legislature. He had indomitable energy and self-reliance and carried on a good mercantile, grist and saw mill and wool carding at High Shoals which accumulated to him a good property. He was a zealous Missionary Baptist and his official acts were pure, clean and untarnished. He died leaving an honorable and cherished character, good works and noble deeds to live after him.

1849-50---C.D. Hudson and R.S. Heflin.

Cicero D. Hudson lived in Bacon Level beat. A potter and afterwards studied and practiced law; a Democrat and Deacon in a Baptist church. During the latter part of the war, he openly avowed his sympathies with the Union cause and alligned himself with the Republicans. When Col. Hudson first began the practice of law he was the butt of the Bar, but that only stimulated him to more efficiency, for he soon stood head and shoulders above some of his critics. He was a close student, hard worker and faithful and wise counsellor. He was full of tricks and you had to watch and be careful or he would catch you napping, especially if he had a bad cause to defend. For all that, he was reasonable and liberal and easily approached. If he professed friendship you could depend on him, for he would not go back on you. He was noble, generous, tactable and when you once sounded him, you could but love and admire his fidelity and fealty. Unfortunately, with a heart full of Christian charity, mercy and liberality, his intemperate habits gathered in clouds of dissipation and hid his good qualities from those that need light and cheer. "If out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh," certainly out of a Christian heart noble, generous and charitable deeds abound. I am persuaded these many Christian traits - with a confession of faith and burial in Baptism were none other than a foundation no other man can lay that is laid, which is Jesus Christ. Though it may not seem to have been gold, silver or precious stones, it may have been wood, hay or stubble and burn up and his works suffered loss, but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire." "By grace through faith you are saved, and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God." God is able to save. It is through his goodness, mercy and love we are saved. Who knoweth the will and depth of God's love, mercy and power? If man can forgive wrongs, and who is it that doesn't, why not a loving, merciful God? His transgressions were moral disobedience. Christ had redeemed him from a spiritual death.

Written for The Toiler, by Capt. J.M.K. Guinn

1851-2---John Reaves and R.C. Pool.

Judge John Reaves. (See serials on Clerk and County Judge.)

Robert C. Pool lived on High Pine Creek, south of Concord Church, in Roanoke beat, or near the line. He came to Randolph County when there were only a few families anywhere near. It must have been in 1831 or 32, from the best information gathered. He was 53 years of age when elected, a farmer, a stock raiser and a Democrat. He was a brother of the late William P. Pool, who lived on the Roanoke and Louina public road. Pole, Thad and Polk were three of his sons. Napoleon and Polk are living in Texas. Thasseus was a member of Capt. John F. Smith's company "I" 13th Alabama Volunteers and was killed June 27th, 1862 at Mechanicsville, Va. just about good daylight. The writer saw him sitting, leaning his back against the bank of the road. It was said: "He was shot through the thigh and bled to death." Uncle Bob was one of the Trustees of Roanoke Academy incorporated by the Legislature in 1844. He made plenty of everything and lived well; was a plain old-time farmer, full of life and activity. He died many years ago.

1853-4---William P. Newell and John Goodin

William P. Newell. (See serial on Sheriff.)

John Goodin was a Whig, farmer, land speculator and negro trader. He was 47 years of age when elected. He had no education; could neither read nor write, except his name, yet his callidity (?) seemed boundless. With ready wit, tireless tongue and an inexhaustible fund of ancedotes, which he told in a fluent flexible and humerous style, without any rapidness; he higgled them out by the wholesale on all public occasions.

1849---The Democrats defeated him for the legislature, and again in 1851, but the last time by a small majority vote. When the full returns were in and the result known, on the night following the election, I heard Goodin tell father he was a "Standing candidate," and would run again in 1853. "And" said he, "in every election thereafter until I am elected." In 1853, the Whigs ran Thomas F. Lundie, for the State Senate, John Goodin and R.G. Roberts for the Legislature. Neither Lundie nor Goodin could make a stump speech, but Uncle Roberts, the bell maker and Methodist class leader, could talk and reason very well. Neither could Gay, Democratic candidate for Senator, nor Newell nor Humphries, candidates for the Legislature, make a speech; but the Democrats had Bob Heflin, whose voice was fluent, flexible and stentorious, with fascinating spontainety; Ex-Governor W.H. Smith and Judge John T. Heflin, who were all in the vigor of manhood. John Goodin dreaded Bob Heflin, for he was a fanatic on smutty yarns and anecdotes. He told one on Goodin in the campaign of 1851 that Goodin, with all his ready wit and chicanery, couldn't appease. It was like Banquo's ghost--it wouldn't go down.

Goodin had dark skin, black hair and eyes, and was one of the first pioneers of the county, being here before and at the time of the Creek treaty in March, 1832. Land speculators, stock owners and herders, old bachelors and young sports, many absconding criminals and horse thieves, were the advance guard. Pony Clubs were organized, justifying their acts under the claim of protecting property owners; but, like all outlaw organizations which are ruled by self-interest, self-will and conquest, many wrongs were chargeable to its door, and it became so tyrannical, aggresive and unbearable, another organization was formed and Christized (?) into existance, styling themselves "regulators." It, too, was a hotch potch of cow-thieves and land grabbers, whose main object and purpose was to keep honest bona fide settlers from coming in and taking up the choice reservation and other tracts of land. The above explanation will enable my readers to understand why Bob's anecdote trenched and touched so closely on

Visited January 4, 1970. This old cemetery is located on the southwest corner of the Whitehaven-Capleville Road (Shelby Drive) and Tulane Road, in Whitehaven, and, at one time, belonged to the Lemuel Farrow family. The first church on this location was the Nonconnah Baptist Church, known now as the Whitehaven Baptist Church, which relocated on Highway 51 South in 1885. The grounds of the old church were given to the Negro families of the community for a church on the condition that they cut the grass and clean the cemetery grounds once a year. A few old stones remain:
